

November 2009: ENERCON Acquires Beckett & LaRue

November 1, 2009 Enercon Services, Inc (ENERCON) acquired Beckett & LaRue. Beckett & LaRue is an engineering and consulting firm with offices in Marietta, Georgia and Orlando, Florida. Beckett & LaRue is primarily known for their engineering and design of Transmission and Distribution (T&D) systems. The company will become part of the Power Generation Services (PGS) group and will add power delivery to the long list of services currently provided to operating plants and services provided for the development of new power plants.

Carter Noland, ENERCON's Vice President of PGS stated: "Beckett & LaRue is a strategic fit to ENERCON's long range plan for diversified growth in the electric power industry and they bring power distribution and delivery expertise that complements the power generation services currently provided by PGS. The initiatives that the country is pursuing to realign the sources of power generation will require extensive design for new T&D, as well as upgrades to existing power grids. This service area aligns very well with ENERCON's Environmental and Industrial Services division which supports the environmental permitting and studies required to install new transmission lines."

ENERCON is a diversified energy consulting company offering engineering, environmental and management services. ENERCON provides comprehensive design, engineering, procurement and construction management related to power plant retrofits, plant life extension, power uprates, operations support, efficiency management and full life-cycle maintenance services. ENERCON is an employee owned company of over 1000 people located in sixteen offices nationwide with clients including electric utilities, the Department of Energy and many Fortune 500 companies.
